2/15/2023 18:39:55	Yes	Yes	2	3	2	The salad was fresh, the steak was slightly tough and not very warm but cooked properly. N/A	4	2	I was not drinking this evening due to the snow and was certainly glad not to be. The venue was very beautiful as always.	I would have preferred a more traditional meal (haggis, neeps, tatties, cranachan for dessert) and perhaps a couple more ceilidh dances. Including a whisky in the price or a ticket or having a signature cocktail like a penicillin at a more reasonable cost would be really nice.	Yes	Entertainment

2/16/2023 10:15:17	Yes	Yes	1-Low	1-Low	1-Low	We had people at our table who purchased drinks ($35+ for two) only to have their more than 1/2 full drinks taken away when they went to the bathroom. Food was cold and the fish wasn't good. The salad had dressing on it, some at the table had their swimming in dressing, some had very little, one couldn't eat it due to fear of allergens and not knowing what was in it. The dessert was excellent. Had to request coffee and water. Way overpriced for quality of food, which seems to have gone way down hill from past experiences.	3	1-Low	1-Low	Drink pricing was over-the-top outrageously priced. Pours on whisky were not what Alexander's used to pour for $10 less per drink. Very disappointed.	5-High	1-Low	My primary reason for attending the Burns is fellowship. The entertainment should be limited in duration to half an hour in total. When you can't talk at the table because it's disrespectful to the singers--too many who sang way to long--or the dancers, who were great but danced way to long, then the evening isn't as good as it should be. The evening for me is about meeting new friends, sharing with people, and enjoying one another's company. The entertainment this time was way too much and seemed to never end. Half an Hour is more than enough to have to sit in our seats and shut up.	5-High	1-Low	4	3	Fellowship, friendship, sharing each other's company. These are the vital things about the Burns celebration. These are the ONLY vital things for me. Too much scheduled entertainment takes away from this.	4	On a snowy evening time to talk was limited because many people fed as soon as dinner was over, which is something that should be planned for. Limit entertainment. Let people talk at their tables without appearing rude. The evening isn't about dancers, or pipers, or old tunes being sung, although all of that in proportion (a much smaller one) can make the evening exceptional. Keep it in balance. It's way too much now. The costs for value given were poor. The charitable focus of the evening needs to be more clearly stated. Disappointed in the Wisconsin Club. Beautiful, but not worth the cost.	Focus on fellowship. Focus on being together and enjoying one another while generating income for charitable acts.	Yes	It's hard to answer this with one answer. Cost is a big factor, but value is more important to me. I dislike having so much time given to entertainment. Food quality is important, especially if you're paying so much for it. It's time to change venues. The Wisconsin Club is no longer worth it. Drink costs alone would make me want to try someplace new--add poor food quality except for the dessert which was fabulous and changing venues seems to be a no brainer.
